CAMPBELL & M'DERMOT, EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 4.

THE New York Round Table 1 (from which we quote a very readable article this morning) gives the daily newspapers of that city a rough overhauling, and declares that the great metropolis of the country cannot boast of a first- It w class newspaper. It further states that any of the dallies there will suffer by comparison with those of Chicago, and cites the fact that their news is neither comprehensive nor reliable. It pitches into the Associated Press telegraphic arrangement, denounces it as radically defective, charges it with venality, monopoly, and a great want of vigor and suplicity. The Tuble asks the follow-simplicity. The Table asks the solventing questions:

"Why do not some of our wealthy capitalists who are familiar with European journalism, and who have the good name of the metropolis at heart, unite and subscribe a sufficient sum to establish a first-class daily paper in this city?"

The Express newspaper is a good deal stirred up by the comments of the "Table," and bids it set the example of what a daily newspaper ought to be by changing from a weekly into a morn-thanging from a weekly into a morn properly reminds the neophytes of the "Table" that it is one thing to criticise and another to perform; and that excellence in a newspaper way is scarce the world over. Of all business it is the one in which the greatest (comparative) number of failures are made. But the fewest number of newspaper enterprises ever succeed, "Over forty daily parties."

see the Richmond papers say somethin. In regard to the statue of Washington brought here last July a year ago from Lexington, at the time of the famou Hunter raid. We are only surprised that they have been silent so long. If would seem that the whereabouts of the classic bronze is not generally known in Richmond—at least not to the editors of the Enquirer. We clip the following remarks from that capacity.

the editors of the Enquirer. We clip the following remarks from that paper in reference to the subject:

The re-establishment of the Institute at Lexington will be an event of much importance to the educational interests of Virginia. At first, a mere country sechool, a gabin in shape and size, the progress of a few years witnessed its growth into a stately structure, and the fostering care of the Siato secared for it at length a rank among institutions of learning, which rendered it at once an ornament and an object of popular pride. By the misfortunes of war it was reduced to ashes, and not only was its material attractiveness thus removed from the sight of our citizens, but the favorite symbol of its moral and military glory, its statuo of George Washington, was carried away, and is now, no doubt, hidden among the accumulated plunder of the capital of the United States. It is unnecessary to recount the circumstances of this incident, or to criticise the act which deprived the State of one of its many herole monuments.

Now that the institution is to be revived, the restoration of this status should be one of the prime objects afts officers. We presume some measures have already been taken to secure so laster and and but as nothing has been made public in regard to it, propriety suggests a pressure of the suited and states in the Scate and the Scate a

Now that the institution is to be revived, the restoration of this statue should be one of the prime objects of its officers. We presume some measures have already been taken to secure so desirable an end, but as nothing has been made public in regard to it, propriety suggests a pressure of the subject upon the attention of both the State and the United States authorities. There can certainly be no claim to the possession of this statue as a trophy of war.—It was the embodiment in brouze of an association dear to every American citizen. Where ever placed, even in the wilds of a barbarian country, it should have been sacred from the hostile touch of an American.

At the time the statue was brought here we took occasion to characterize here we took occasion to characterize the act of dethroning it from its ancien pedestal and dragging it across the mountains as a piece of vandalism unworthy our arms, and we have never seen reason to change our opinion. We object however, to the Enquirer associ-

We object however, to the Kaparier associating the status as the "aymbol" of the "moral and military ploy" of the Vicy ginia Military Institute, a concern that was simply a mere Tredegar fron works from which so much war material in the shape of young seession officers were turned out every year, for the "rebellion. We do not remember ever to have heard of a single officer or private in the Union army that had been educated at the Virginia Military Institute, a Concern that was states" rights seession concern from the Virginia Military Institute, a Concern that was a States" rights seession concern from the State. Weakington's status had no "moral" connection with it.—But for the "deep damnation of his taking off," we have no doubt Washington's status ing off, we have no doubt Washington's status ing off, we have no doubt Washington's status ing off," we have no doubt Washington's status ing off, we have no doubt washingt

The New York Albian, a critical litterary paper, says that "the best of these tales—and one which is worth the price of the entire volume—is Miss Harding's "Life in the Iron Mills."

Senator Howe of Wisconsin, in a speech at Milwaukee on the 19th ult. said:

"One year ago, when large rebel armies were fighting on Southern fields for the defeat of our tickes, then I hald out to you only the flag of the Union, and I appealed to you to stand by the party which stood by it. Then I asked you stand by the Union Party, because it seemed save the country. Now I ask you stand by the Union Party, because it seemed save the country. Now I ask you stand by the Union Party because it seemed save the country."

It strikes us that this is the case about as compactly put as well could be.

serves as follows:

The election returns, so far as received, show, throughout the State, deedded gains for the Union party, though, as a senseral thing, there is a falling off from the Presidential vote. In this Senatorial district the result is particularly gratifying, since it was an understood thing that the opposition were to make a desparate effort. Well, they have done their divinest, and the result shows that instead of having gained by all their exertions, they have decidedly lost groinfa.

It was considered throughout the district that this election was to test the elative strength of the Union party and of all the odds and ends of parties opposed to it; and this consideration gave peculiar interest to the election, and made the victory the more gratifying, insomuch as it was hardly contested.

Out of a tole roll of ever vote: Words that go to the Finger's Ends Jersey City, and we quote from the New York Tribune's report the most interesting passages of his attiring speach: "New Jersey, I believe, is the only State in the Union, where slavery does not exist, that refused to pass the amendment to the Constitution of the United States, declaring that slavery should never again exist in this proud Government of ours. And this was not because they had an interest in slavery, but because they wanted to do nothing that would be objectionable to this people with whom they had been politically associated so lobg, and with whom their sympathies were so strong. There could have been no other reason for it. Oh, if I had it in my power, and these men were collected here to night, I would assemble in their presence.

To THE PUBLIC.—We desire to call he attention of the public to the follow-ng letter, which we have just received: PASSAIC, New Jersey, Oct. 23, 1866.
